Brood X cicadas are coming in 2021, but probably not to Missouri.

University of Missouri Extension horticulturist Tamra Reall says Missourians may see some straggler cicadas from other states, but not the massive swarms of noisy insects that more eastern states will see. She says the next brood to emerge in Missouri will not appear until 2024.

Periodical cicadas, as opposed to their larger annual counterparts, emerge every 13 or 17 years in late May to early July. Adults are an inch long and have a 3-inch wingspan.

While some find them annoying, periodical cicadas are mostly harmless, according to Reall. They might damage young trees when the female deposits her eggs into small stems. You can prevent this by covering with cheesecloth or mosquito netting. Generally, healthy, mature trees will do just fine.

Please keep our Lake safe!

We have been finding a lot of litter around the Lake lately. Neighbors, please be careful not to leave your fishing hooks, lines and nets around the Lake, and not to leave any articles of clothing, toys, beverage containers or food behind.

Dogs have been known to swallow fishing hooks and lines, which requires surgery to remove, and people can be badly injured by stepping on hooks or broken beverage containers. Also, the company that mows the common area around the lake does not want to run over your belongings and damage their equipment. Thanks for keeping our Lake a safe place for people and pets to enjoy.
